

ABSTRACT

A handwriting recognition software program for use with an embedded device includes an encoding module for encoding character strokes input into an input device as integer values and a character recognition module for recognizing characters as integer units.